FOR THE RIGHTS OF THE MOUNTAIN PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY, NOT THEIR WRONGS.

VOLUME I.

SALYERSVILLE, MAGOFFIN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1912.

NUMBER 23.

Correspondence.

To CORRESPONDENTS: Mail your letters early so they will get to us at least on Monday night. RULES: Write on one side of the paper only; write plainly; spell names correctly, and write "Cor" on the envelope. Leave out neighborhood visits or we will.

If your letter does not appear, remember that it was either too late or that its contents did not justify publication.

We leave out a part, or all, of other letters as well as yours.

Our space is limited and we must leave out much that is intended for publication. That is one of the many unthankful tasks of the editor.

Correspondents get your LETTERS in early.

HORTENSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Arnett, of Hendricks, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Patrick.

Willmore Collins and charming daughter of A. J. Johnson were united in matrimony this week. We extend to them our congratulations.

Troy Higgins and Jack Patrick have taken an extensive of hauling tan bark for J. M. Gullett of this place.

A severe rain and wind storm struck this section Thursday, the 11th inst., which was supposed to have originated on the Contrary Fork of Pricy as it blew the corn down hill and then turned and blew it up hill. Tell Rule Johnson to change sides with his weather signals or we will have him beat for President.

Crops are looking fine, so are the women voters, but if they don't vote to suit their husbands in electing trustees I am afraid there will be an old fashioned hair plating.

The Louisville Cooperage Co., has nearly completed setting up their mill on Panchon creek, which will give lots of work for the boys.

OLDE.

Mrs. Fannie Little, of Ashland, has returned home after a weeks visit with relatives at this place.

Mrs. Pearl Litteral is visiting relatives at Paintsville.

Warnie E. Whitt has returned from the west after a stay of three years.

Mrs. Lizzie Cheek is improving slowly.

Farmers at this place have been pushing their work this week so as to get their crops done.

PUFF STUFF.

WHEELERSBURG.

Wick Talent and Mrs. Hulda Cantrill were married a few days ago.

Mrs. John Blanton is on the sick list.

Charles Wheeler and wife are visiting relatives at Davisville.

Mr. Gray was calling on our merchants this week.

JAKE.

GAPVILLE.

Crops were damaged very badly in this vicinity by the storm.

Martha B. and Adam Holbrook have returned from Prestonsburg where have been spending the 4th. They report a nice time and the greatest event in the history of Prestonsburg.

Leander Collins is still on the sick list.

IVYTON.

Willie Grace is very ill at this writing and was compelled to quit his work with the Dawkins lumber Co.

The foot washing went off very nicely and some few with a bad case of head swim.

Harris Poe says when he is elected to Congress that he will do away with the foot washing business, and we feel that if the chickens are allowed a vote he will be the man.

School began here Monday with Miss Mae Hurt as teacher. Everything is progressing nicely.

H. C. Kelley spent Saturday and Sunday here.

H. C. Kelling and family, of Paintsville, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Ethel Caldwell, of East Bank, W. Va., is visiting Nealus Kelley.

Cash Satyer, of Salyersville, spent Sunday here.

CARVER.

On Tuesday evening, the 9th, the wife of Martin Poe took sick and died at once. She leaves a husband and three children.

Oakley is very quiet now. The boys can't get any whiskey to drink just now. They are so still you never know they are on the place until you see them.

We continue to receive communications not signed. Don't expect to see them in print if you do not sign them.

BRADLEY.

Mrs. James Birchfield and daughter Lula have returned from Wolfe county where they have been visiting friends and relatives.

Boone Howard has gone to Swampten to begin his school.

Reanseau Patrick, Green and Coon Adams began a big logging job on the Green Rock fork of Jenny's creek Monday.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Bailey July 13th, and left a boy.

Walter Cain began school at this place Monday.

HOPEFUL.

President Taft has removed Mr. L. B. McHargue as postmaster of London, Ky., because the London Echo, managed by Mr. McHargue, was for Roosevelt and severely criticised the President. Our boasted freedom of the press seems a dream as far officials are concerned. — Harrodsburg Leader.

Our School Department.

We will be glad to publish brief letters under this head from our County Superintendent, our teachers and others interested in education.

Steam Roller in Use in Our County.

Should the People Have a Voice in The Schools.

Under the existing conflicts and emotions aroused by hiring teachers it seems as if there were no way to control a trustee after he once gets in office. It seems to several of the people over our county that whoever the trustee nominates the Division Board must hire. It seems to them and most every one that it places all the power of hiring the teacher in the trustee's discretion, that whoever that trustee nominates the board must hire. It is understood by many that there is no power of rejection. Yet the law plainly says the trustee must present to the Division Board all credentials, remonstrances and objections, and nominations in writing, and petitions for or against the hiring of a teacher that the Board SHALL hire that teacher unless there are reasonable objections. If there be a vacancy or a rejection of teacher in any school the chairman must immediately notify the trustees and request further nominations.

Now, the time is when every man must send his children from the ages of seven to twelve. Naturally, the patrons are looking for the best teacher. Every one wants to know the teacher to teach his school. He wants to know the applicants. He wants to pick from them those who have the best recommendations and record as a teacher. They elect a trustee to represent them. If through relation of trustee to teacher or personal feelings for or against some teacher, or the relatives of the teacher, that trustee wishes a teacher and the patrons do not desire him and desire a better teacher, is there no way for the patrons of a district to obtain their choice of a teacher?

Indeed there is! The new law says the trustee of each sub-district must bring in all petitions, objections and remonstrances. Are they to be considered? If they are not for what purpose must that trustee bring them in? Who considers these petitions, remonstrances, etc? It is the law straight as a line for the trustees of the board to consider them. Then reject that application, if the patrons object to it, because the law plainly says in case of rejection the chairman must immediately notify the trustee of the vacancy or rejection and request further nominations.

All the chairmen were notified not to regard any petitions or remonstrances, and such like, but to elect the teachers over these objections as each trustee would nominate to his discretion. Such an action is disastrous to the will of the people. It is applying and teaching the people the Steam Roller process in every district and doing away with the law and the people's voice. This is an age of progressive principles—the greatest thought that has agitated millions of people—

"Shall the people rule?" In order to make good citizens every district should obtain the best teacher possible. The people are looking for the best teacher. Shall the Steam Roller knock them out in order to satisfy the favored few or certain clicks? It is the duty of every trustee to satisfy the patrons. There are enough good trustees in every division who will listen to the voice of the people and the cries of the thousands of children that are starving for a good education.

The women of the county have every child at heart. They are mothers and sisters. They know the need their children have for an education. Arise, mothers, sisters, let your voice be heard! Get in and become trustees of your school! Pick out the choice man or woman whose word is his bond, that he or she will always represent and heed the voice of the people! Get in the fight! It is your children for whom you are fighting. It means enlightenment, manhood and womanhood to them such as you may be proud of some day. Many a boy whose father and mother can scarcely make sufficient funds to feed and clothe from year to year has arisen from want and poverty to fame and plenty. The schools are for the people. The law is for the people. The people's voice shall rule. Men, women and children shall be blessed, for this is a progressive age.

JOSEPHUS HOWARD.

[Big Sandy News.]

Dear Trustee:

Owing to the many complications arising under this new school law, and in order that we may all arrive at a better understanding of the same, especially that part relative to enforcement of attendance, and the enforcement of the Graded Course of Study in all the schools, the County Board of Education has deemed it wise to provide for the payment of the expenses of every trustee in the county in order that they may attend Wednesday's session of the Teachers' Institute, July 17th. That day will be known as Trustees' Day. The new school law will be explained in all its phases and a uniform system for conducting the schools planned.

Supervisor T. J. Coates, of Frankfort, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, of Rowan county, and Mrs. Chas. P. Weaver, of Louisville, President of School Improvement League, will be present and address the Institute on that day.

It will be greatly to the interest of the schools of the county if the trustees could attend the full session of the Teachers' Institute and as many as can are urged to do so, but those who can not are urgently requested to be present on Wednesday, July 17th. Their expenses for that day will be paid and I will guarantee that you will not regret attending.

The interests of the little children in your district demand that you do all in your power to aid in securing better schools and you can help the cause in no better way than by meeting together on this occasion, discussing the difficult questions arising under the new school law, and getting in closer touch with the best methods of administering the laws.

By so doing we will be able to work in unison throughout the county, according to one intelligent system, and with every trustee, teacher and County Superintendent working along the same lines, our schools are bound to improve.

I trust every trustee in the county will be present on Trustees' Day and if possible bring some of the patrons of your school with you.

It is more important that the trustees and patrons attend the institutes than the teachers themselves, if success is about 9-10 inspiration and 1-10 educational, and its success depends entirely on the interest it arouses for better schools throughout the county.

The trustee's attention is hereby called to the law regarding books for "indigent" children. Within two weeks of the opening of the school, the trustee should make a canvas of the district and urge all patrons to send their children to school, and if any children are unable to attend because they are too poor to purchase books they must report to me these facts, stating the name of each parent and child and the number and names of books needed. The County Board has decided that the books should not be ordered until the school begins, so that the teacher may determine just what books are needed, but the trustee must see that the children attend the first day of the school, so that the teacher may select the proper books and report to me at once.

Trusting that this will be the banner year for Lawrence county schools and that I will meet with every progressive trustee in the county on Trustees' Day at the Teachers' Institute, I am,

Most respectfully yours,
JAY O'DANIEL, Supt.

EDITORIAL.

"Honesty is the best policy" in politics as well as business.

The New School Law.

If you are a parent or a guardian of a child between the ages of 7 and 12 years, inclusive, you should keep it in school every day. Otherwise you are likely to be fined heavily. You might do your neighbor who cannot read and write a favor by telling them of this law that compels attendance.

Teachers and trustees are enforcing the individual cup law pretty well in the schools. The object of this law was to prevent tuberculosis and other contagious diseases. This law does but little good if each individual dips his cup into a bucket. Every school should be supplied with a vessel with a faucet where each child could get a drink without dipping his cup into the bucket.

Two? New Bridges for Magoffin.

At the last meeting of the Fiscal Court they considered bridging Licking river. Some want to bridge it near the Colonel Gardner ford, some at the Mayford above town, some want it bridged at both places, which would be about two miles apart, others want it bridged near Salyersville, and still others think it is idle talk of the Fiscal Court. However they meet Saturday, July 27, for the purpose of discussing and possibly deciding a place or places to bridge it.

It is argued by many that there must be two bridges because to put just one across the river at Salyersville would put the county to a great expense to build roads to the bridge.

It is thought by some people that Magoffin county will some day in the future have a railroad. If you will study the geography of your county seat you will see that it is very difficult to have a railroad run through the town of Salyersville. If we have our way of course we would have it come on this side of the river. It would possibly mean more to the editor of the Mountaineer than any other individual as his farm would be in great demand for building lots.

But facts are facts and about nine chances out of ten, if a railroad comes through this section, it will come by way of John Gardner's farm. Some of our citizens say that this would kill Salyersville. Hardly. All people do not want their residences to front on a railroad, but most people do like to be convenient to a railroad. The court house, the schools and at least a few people would remain on this side of the river. They would want to cross the river to the railroad, and the people across the river would like to come over to the court house, schools and churches.

If the Fiscal Court builds two bridges now they are likely to need a third one in a few years. So if they are to build more than one bridge why not build three while at it? We would suggest that they order half a dozen or a dozen as they might get them at wholesale prices then. We have seen Price creek, not Contrary Fork, so high that we could not ford it. There are at least half a dozen fords on the river that could be bridged and as many creek fords.

The only objection to purchasing bridges by the dozen, half dozen or one sixth of a dozen is that it puts our county in debt deeper and the first thing we know the paupers and others who hold claims on the county will be receiving about 20 or 25 cents to the dollar rather than 75 cents to the dollar.

If any of our readers, their friends or relatives have any influence with any member of the Fiscal Court we urge them to try to reason with these men and if they are to put more than one bridge across the river to give us at least three or more. Many of our citizen would be accommodated if we had half a dozen bridges across Licking and as many across the creeks. If the Fiscal Court wants to go out of office with a flush treasury we suggest that they only build one. They might want to buy a newspaper since the Mountaineer does not seem to be run as some of those gentlemen would have a paper run. They can invest in many other enterprises aside from bridges.

Two More Gone For Life.

After a week's worry in the court room and by being under guard all the while, the jury that was trying Berry Burton for murder, and Charley Harvey and Ben Harvey, accomplices to the crime, returned a verdict on last Saturday night, at a late hour, as follows:

Burton and Charley Harvey were sentenced for life. Ben Harvey was acquitted.

On the first ballot the jury stood ten to two for sending Burton to the Chair. One of the two finally agreed to say to the chair, but the lone one left saved Burton a trip to Eddyville. Our attitude toward murders is getting better. It seems that the minimum sentence now is for life, and when 5-6 of a jury are ready to say to the chair with him it is about time to cut out booze and lay by our Barking Trowsers.

Murdered man in this case was a Samuel Picklesimer, said to be as good a citizen as there was in Magoffin county.

The defendants had a change of venue from Magoffin to this county. The case has already cost more than $2,000. This trial alone has exceeded $1,400. This is not the worst. Think of the lives that are ruined by this Christmas drinking. When, oh when will our young men and old men for that matter lay down the use of liquor.

Special Judge J. M. Robinson presided thru this trial, Judge Gardner being a delegate to the Baltimore Convention. Judge Robinson is the appointed Judge for the new Judicial District composed of Pike and Letcher. He ruled with dignity and justice.

The council for the defendants entered a motion for a new trial but the Court over ruled the motion. Now an appeal will be taken and more expense in this costly matter will be incurred.—Big Sandy Monitor.

The Editor's Dream.

Last evening I was talking With an editor, aged and gray. Who told me of a dream he had, I think 'twas Christmas day. While snoozing in his office, The vision came to view, For he saw an angel enter. Dressed in garments white and new.

Said the angel, "I'm from heaven, The Lord just sent me down To bring you up to glory And put on your golden crown. You've been a friend to every one,

And worked hard night and day, You have educated thousands; And from few received your pay, So we want you up in glory, For you have labored hard, And the good Lord is preparing Your eternal just reward."

Then the angel and the editor Started up towards glory's gate, But when passing close to hades, The angel murmured "wait! I have a place to show you— It's the hottest place in hell— Where the ones who never paid you

In torments always dwell." And, behold, the editor saw there Old subscribers by the score, And, grabbing up a chair and fan,

He wished for nothing more: But was bound to sit and watch

Public Speaking.

Judge A. J. Kirk, of Paintsville, who is a candidate for Appellate Judge of this district, subject to the action of the Republican party, at the August primary, will speak at the Court House next Monday. In our opinion, Judge Kirk is the best qualified man that we have on the ticket and should have our support. Come and hear him and be satisfied for you self.

them As they aizzle, ainge and burn, And his eyes would rest on debtors, Which ever way they'd turn. Said the angel, "Come on, editor, There's the pearly gates to see," But the editor only murmured, "This is heaven enough for me." —Echange.

PLANTING AN ASPARGUS BED

As One Is Expected to Last for Twenty Years Soil Should Be Prepared in Thorough Manner.

A good asparagus bed is expected to last 20 years. The soil should, therefore, be prepared in a most thorough manner.

A warm, sandy soil is best, but it will do well in any good garden soil that is free from stones. A soil that has been heavily manured a few previous seasons is preferable to manuring heavily at the time of setting out the roots, but at no period should asparagus be allowed to suffer from lack of manuring, as first-class shoots can only be grown in very rich soil.

For the home garden the plants may be set out in rows about thirty inches apart, having the plants about eighteen inches apart.

The best time for setting out asparagus is early in the spring, usually about the end of April. Where the rows are to be made furrows one foot wide and eight inches deep. In these furrows set the plants in a natural position with the roots spread well apart and about twelve to eighteen inches apart. Be careful to cover the crown of the plants not more than two inches in the start, as the shoots from newly set plants are not strong enough to force through a deep mass of earth. The furrow may be gradually filled as the shoots advance in growth.

The object of setting the crowns so far below the surface is to protect them from injury when cutting the shoots for use, as they are usually cut about two inches below the surface.

Although growers differ in their opinions on what the age of plants for setting should be, one-year-old plants seem to give the best satisfaction.

EXCELLENT TRUCK FOR BAGS

A truck that answers a double purpose has been designed by an Ohio man. Besides being adapted to the uses of a regular truck it is equipped with a holding device by which a bag may be held with its mouth open to permit of its being easily filled. The extension on the lower end of the truck is wide enough to support the bottom of the bag, while at the top of the truck is a semicircular bar that clamps the mouth of the bag and holds the latter in a perpendicular position, so that whatever is to be put into it can be dumped in without the trouble of holding the bag open with one hand. When the truck is to be used for its original purpose it is simply dropped down on the wheels.

GARDEN and FARM NOTES

This is a good time to organize an agricultural club in your neighborhood.

Are you roasting your shins by the fire, or turning these wintry days into profit?

Keep all the tools that are used around the barn in convenient and safe places.

In the large producing sections cabbage are stored in specially prepared frost-proof houses.

How much does it cost you to leave that machinery standing out in the weather? Shedding is cheap! Many a new and valuable implement is left out all winter more through carelessness than anything else.

The business that grows rapidly may well be watched closely. Concerns of slow growth are usually more stable.

Farm success comes to the man who runs his little bit of land on the same plan that the engineer does his train—right on the dot.

It is as idle and useless to expect good crops from inferior seed as it would be to endeavor to breed thoroughbred cattle from scrub stock.

Fence the hay and straw stacks so that the cattle cannot get at them. If permitted to eat around the bottom they will waste more than they eat.

If possible have a separate building in which to do the butchering work, and thus save the women folks as much as you can. It is man's work.

Take the frost out of your grindstone before you grind the ox, but do it gradually, and not by using hot water. That would injure the quality of the stone.

Lata in the fall after the close of the honey flow, bees cluster in a compact mass for the winter, usually on the central combs, and so remain until settled weather in the spring, or until brood rearing is well established.

What Advertising Does. We all know that advertising creates desire, causing readers to wish for an advertised thing.

Advertising also creates choice. Oftentimes before the article is needed people remark: "If I ever own such and such a thing it will be of the so and so make."

Advertising changes earlier choice. By this means an unbought article was an opinion more favorable than the opinion of what is already possessed. The owner has become favorable to a change.

These mental attitudes form the road to a sale. It may be soon; it may be long as it is used, but the road is mapped out and some time it will bring the buyer to the seller.

The Newspaper. You, whose eyes glance at this page, read a newspaper upon which you rely to keep you informed of all that makes life worth living. Practically every other man in the United States does the same thing. He reads his newspaper, the paper that brings him the news that makes life worth living. To the man who read it, it brings not only the news of the world, but the news of their neighbors, of themselves, of their town, their community, their street, often of the very house they live in.—Thomas E. Dockrell.

IS ANIMAL EXPERIENCE A SAFE GUIDE?

"Is it true that those animals that eat flesh are more vigorous and enduring than the vegetable eaters, and is animal experience a safe guide for man?" a reader asks. Most of our knowledge of physiology has been obtained by experiments upon animals—and humane vivisection, properly restricted, is just as justifiable as dental or surgical work, properly restricted—and as the general principles of nutrition apply throughout the animal kingdom, comparative physiology is helpful as a guide in nutrition. No animal is more efficient, mentally and physically, within the scope of its advancement, than the gorilla, man's nearest relative among the lower animals, and Huxley says ("Men's Place in Nature") that the gorilla is strictly frugivorous. The elephant is not less vigorous or less intelligent than the lion. One writer advocating vegetarianism, says that the dog suffers much from cancer and lives a short life because of his flesh diet; another says his life is out short by eating cereals. Flesh is the natural food of the dog and he is probably injured by a mixed diet as much as man, and is more subject to cancer than any other animal, but he is affected by unnatural living otherwise, especially by lack of sufficient exercise. We have much to learn from animals, but careful, unprejudiced, correct reasoning is necessary.

Nelson Collins Bound in $1,000 Bond and Bud Collins Still at Large. $250 Reward Offered.

The examining trial of Dennie Saylor was held before Judge Salyer Monday. He was acquitted and many who heard the evidence think that he will leave the county before Circuit Court convenes. He had been put in jail on a warrant as being an accomplice to the murder of Mack Bailey.

The Sheriff of Johnson county delivered Nelson Collins, who is said to have assisted Bud Collins in making his escape, to the local authorities Wednesday. He waived the examining trial, filled a bond of $1,000 and returned home.

Bud Collins, who shot and instantly killed Mack Bailey July 7th, is still at large with no clue as to his whereabouts.

USE OF DRUGS DIMINISHING.

"No medicine will be given by and by, for people are going to eat the right things." Dr. W. A. Evans of the Chicago Board of Health quotes this statement of a widely traveled, experienced English nurse, speaking of the preparation of food for invalids. Dr. Wiley has been quoted to the same effect. The expense for drugs at the Massachusetts General hospital has been reduced 50 per cent. in ten years. In the same article, Dr. Evans says that "a cup of hot water is a good temporary stimulant in case of fainting or temporary exhaustion. It has its advantages over alcohol for this purpose. There will probably always be use for drugs, but natural means of course, and especially food are to be used more in place of drugs."

All feed possible should be grown on the farm.

Turkeys do not take kindly to indoor roosting places.

Try to protect all stock from cold winds and rains. It pays.

At the time of shipment the fleeces of sheep or lambs should be dry.

Wear an ill-fitting collar. If you wish, in order to be stylish, but don't make your horse wear one that is not a smooth fit.

Many farmers have yet to learn that a cow cannot live upon an unpalatable ration of corn and straw and do anywhere near her best.

Remember that quality is ahead of size every time. The hog which will produce the most pork with the least waste is the desired sort.

A shed of poles covered with straw and open to the south will winter the geese nicely if provided with clean, fresh bedding from time to time.

A small flock of healthy hens, given the best of care and attention, will give a yearly profit of $1 per hen, after paying for the food consumed.

The total value of farm lands and buildings in the south in 1910 approximated $6,300,000,000, of which the $1,823,000,000 of Texas was nearly 28 per cent.

The cause of the contamination of milk is largely due to lack of perfect cleanliness with the milking utensils, surroundings, methods of delivery and personal cleanliness.

The horse that can move the most freight in a lifetime is sought by every buyer, but such qualities can not be infallibly indicated by any market test. They must be judged by appearance.

Grape vines may be trimmed in the late fall after the leaves have fallen, but before the vines have frozen, or in the early spring after the wood has thawed out but before the sap has started.

Mares that are not heavy type nor bred to draft stallions are preferred by many for farm work, but not by those who count on their colts to pay their way at heavy work while growing into suitable form.

Hooper the fox's during the winter; that is, give them the kind of food they crave and the kind of food they need to keep their bodies sustained and to permit of their producing eggs at the same time.

A dense fleece is valuable not alone for the increase in quantity of wool but for the protection that it affords the animal from the elements and the dust and chaff that flies about in the yards where they are fed.

A draft horse is valued solely for his ability. It is true good looks increase his usefulness in all lines of commerce where advertising is needed, but the great traffic mover of the world that delivers the railroad's burdens at each end of the route pays his way in power.

The Wreck of the Titan

SYNOPSIS

The great steamer Titan, supposed to be unsinkable, starts across the Atlantic. Rowland, once a lieutenant, now a common sailor, meets his old love Myra. She is with her husband and child.

The Titan cuts a ship in two, and her captain endeavors to run at the crime. Rowland objects. The captain gives him whiskey, so that he will be discredited. Myra accuses him of attempting to murder her child.

Rowland is dragged by the captain's order and is then given the gasboard bridge. Myra's child steals away and joins Rowland.

The Titan strikes an iceberg and sinks. Thousands are lost. Myra escapes to a boat. Rowland and the child find refuge on the iceberg. It is an arm in a fight with a polar bear.

Rowland, who has been an atheist, prays for help, and he and the child are rescued. Meyer, a marine insurance agent, is heavily hit by the loss of the Titan and the Royal Ark.

Meyer will be ruined if the Titan insurance is paid, and Seftidge, the Titan's grandfather, will be ruined if it is not paid. Meyer finds Rowland and relies upon his story to break the insurance policies. Rowland's story helps him.

The Titan's captain admits that he dragged Rowland Seftidge, thinking himself ruined, dies suddenly. To save a fortune for little Myra, Rowland refuses to testify in Meyer's behalf.

"Right, and I'm with you on it. But you must get out of the country. I don't know the law on the matter, but they may compel you to testify. You can't ship 'fore the mast again, that's settled. But you can have a berth, mate, with me as long as I sail a ship if you'll take it. And you're to make my cabin your home as long as you like, remember that. Still, I know you want to get across with the kid, and if you stay around until I sail it may be months before you get to New York with the chance of losing her by getting lost of English law. But just leave it to me. There are powerful interests at stake in regard to this matter."

What Captain Barry had in mind, Rowland was too weak to inquire. On their arrival at the bank he was assisted by his friend to a couch in the hall, where he spent the rest of the day, unable to leave it. Meanwhile, Captain Barry had gone ashore again.

Returning toward evening he said to the man on the couch: "I've got your pay, mate. I found, and signed a receipt for it, that at seven o'clock, the night of the 15th, you could have worked off that company for fifty thousand more, but I knew you wouldn't touch their money and so, only struck him for your wages. You're entitled to a month's pay. Here it is. American money, about $17." He gave Rowland a roll of bills.

"Now, here's something else, Rowland," he said, handing an envelope. "In consideration of the fact that you lost a few clothes and later your arm through the carelessness of the company's officers, Mr. Thompson offers you this." Rowland opened the envelope. In it were two first-class tickets from Liverpool to New York, traveling both, he said bitterly: "It seems that I'm not to escape it after all."

"Take 'em old man, take 'em. In fact, I took 'em for you, and you and the kid are booked. And I made Thompson agree to settle your doctor's bill and expenses with Meyer. 'Tisn't bribery, I'd beel you myself for the run over; but, hang it, you'll take nothing from me. You've got to get the young'un over. You're the only one to do it. The old gentleman was an American, alone here, hadn't even a lawyer that I could find. The boat sails in the morning, and the night train leaves in two hours. Think of that mother, Rowland. Why, man, I'd travel round the world to stand in

CHAPTER VIII.
The Kidnap.

It was near noon of the next day that Rowland, seated in a stateroom, looking out on a sea spangled with blue from the saloon deck of a westbound liner, remembered that he had made no provisions to leave Mr. Seftidge notified by cable of the safety of her child, and unless Mr. Meyer or his associates gave the story to the press it would not be known.

"Well," he mused, "joy will not kill, and I shall witness it in its fullness if I take her by surprise. But the chances are that it will get into the papers before I reach her. It is too good for Mr. Meyer to keep."

But the story was not given out immediately. Mr. Meyer called a conference of the underwriters concerned in the insurance of the Titan, at which it was decided to remain silent concerning the card they hoped to play and to spend a little time and money in limiting for other witnesses among the Titan's crew and in interviewing Captain Barry to the end of improving his memory. A few stormy meetings with this huge distrustful convinced them of the futility of further effort in his direction, and, after finding at the end of a week that every surviving member of the Titan's port watch, as well as a few of the other, had been induced to sign for Cape voyages or had otherwise disappeared, they decided to give the story told by Rowland to the press in the hope that publicity would avail to bring to light corroboratory evidence.

And this story, improved upon by the reporting by Mr. Meyer to reporters and embellished still further by the reporters as they wrote it up, particularly in the part pertaining to the polar bear, buzzed out in the great dailies of England and the continent and was cabled to New York, with the name of the steamer in which Joba Rowland had sailed (for his movements had been traced in the search for evidence), where it arrived too late for publication the morning of the day on which, with Myra on his shoulder, he stepped down the gangplank at a North river dock. As a consequence he was surrounded on the dock by enthusiastic reporters, who asked of the story and asked for details. He refused to talk, avoided them and, gaining the side street, soon found himself in crowded Broadway, where he entered the office of the steamship company in whose employ he had been wrecked and secured from the Titan's passenger list the address of Mrs. Seftidge.

Seftidge, the only woman saved. Then he took a car up Broadway and alighted abreast of a large apartment house.

"We're going to see mamma soon, Myra," he whispered to the pink ear, "and you must go dressed up. It doesn't matter what you wear, but you're a little bit late in getting ready. These old clothes won't do now." But she had forgotten the word "mamma" and was more interested in the exciting noise and life of the street than in the your shoes when you hand Myra over. I've got a child of my own." The captain's eyes were twinkling and his hand, and Rowland's were shining.

"Yes, I'll take the passage," he said with a smile. "I accept the bribe."

"That's right. You'll be strong and healthy when you land, and when that mother's through thanking you—and you have to think of yourself, remember—I want a mate and will be here a month before sailing. Write to me, care of Lloyd's, if you want the berth, and I'll send you advance money to get back with."

"Thank you, captain," said Rowland as he took the other's hand and then glanced at his empty sleeve, "but my going to sea is ended. Even a mate needs two hands."

"Well, suit yourself, Rowland. I'd make you mate without any hands at all while you had your brains. It's done me good to meet a man like you. And say, old man, you won't take it wrong from me, will you? It's none of my business, but you're too all-fired good a man to drink! You haven't had a nip for two months. Are you going to begin?"

"Never again," said Rowland, rising. "I've a future now, as well as a past."

CHAPTER VIII. The Kidnap.

It was near noon of the next day that Rowland, seated in a stateroom, looking out on a sea spangled with blue from the saloon deck of a westbound liner, remembered that he had made no provisions to leave Mr. Seftidge notified by cable of the safety of her child, and unless Mr. Meyer or his associates gave the story to the press it would not be known.

"Well," he mused, "joy will not kill, and I shall witness it in its fullness if I take her by surprise. But the chances are that it will get into the papers before I reach her. It is too good for Mr. Meyer to keep."

But the story was not given out immediately. Mr. Meyer called a conference of the underwriters concerned in the insurance of the Titan, at which it was decided to remain silent concerning the card they hoped to play and to spend a little time and money in limiting for other witnesses among the Titan's crew and in interviewing Captain Barry to the end of improving his memory. A few stormy meetings with this huge distrustful convinced them of the futility of further effort in his direction, and, after finding at the end of a week that every surviving member of the Titan's port watch, as well as a few of the other, had been induced to sign for Cape voyages or had otherwise disappeared, they decided to give the story told by Rowland to the press in the hope that publicity would avail to bring to light corroboratory evidence.

And this story, improved upon by the reporting by Mr. Meyer to reporters and embellished still further by the reporters as they wrote it up, particularly in the part pertaining to the polar bear, buzzed out in the great dailies of England and the continent and was cabled to New York, with the name of the steamer in which Joba Rowland had sailed (for his movements had been traced in the search for evidence), where it arrived too late for publication the morning of the day on which, with Myra on his shoulder, he stepped down the gangplank at a North river dock. As a consequence he was surrounded on the dock by enthusiastic reporters, who asked of the story and asked for details. He refused to talk, avoided them and, gaining the side street, soon found himself in crowded Broadway, where he entered the office of the steamship company in whose employ he had been wrecked and secured from the Titan's passenger list the address of Mrs. Seftidge.

Seftidge, the only woman saved. Then he took a car up Broadway and alighted abreast of a large apartment house.

"We're going to see mamma soon, Myra," he whispered to the pink ear, "and you must go dressed up. It doesn't matter what you wear, but you're a little bit late in getting ready. These old clothes won't do now." But she had forgotten the word "mamma" and was more interested in the exciting noise and life of the street than in the child's life. "I'll be home soon," Rowland asked for a moment, where a young woman waited for him.

"This child has been shipwrecked," he said. "I have $10,000 to spend on it. Give it a bath, dress its hair and use up the money on a dress, shoes and stockings, everything you like. The young woman stood and kissed the little girl from sheer sympathy, but protested that not much could be done.

"Do your best," said Rowland. "It is all I have. I will wait here."

An hour later, penniless again, he emerged from the store with Myra, bravely dressed in her new finery, and was stopped at the corner by a policeman, who had seen him come out and who marveled doubtless at such juxtaposition of rags and ribbons.

"Whose kid ye got?" he demanded.

"I believe it is the daughter of Mr. Colonel Seftidge," answered Rowland laughingly—too laughingly by far.

"Ye believe, but ye don't know. Come back into the store, me tourist, an' we'll see who ye shole it from."

"Very well, officer; I can prove possession." They started back, the officer with his hand on Rowland's collar, and were met at the door by a party of three or four people coming out. One of this party, a young woman in black, uttered a piercing shriek and sprang toward them.

"Myra!" she screamed. "Give me my baby! Give her to me!"

She snatched the child from Rowland's shoulder, hugged it, kissed it, cried and screamed over it; then, oblivious to the crowd that collected, continually fainted in the arms of an indignant old gentleman.

"You scoundrel!" he exclaimed as he floundered his case over Rowland's head with his free arm. "We've caught you. Officer, take that man to the station house. I will follow and make a charge in the name of my daughter."

"Then he shole the kid, did he?" asked the policeman.

"Don't certainly," answered the old gentleman, with the assistance of the others, he supported the unconscious young mother to a carriage. They all entered, little Myra screaming for Rowland from the arms of a female member of the party, and were driven off.

Some women seem to live charmed lives. We heard of one the other day who has survived four husbands.

Henryk Sienkiewicz, the Polish author who shot himself while hunting, probably took himself for a bear.

Sour milk may be good for the teeth, but a mouthful of sour milk has a tendency to sour one's temper.

Those who have paid taxicab fees in New York are reluctant in believing that one of the companies has failed.

A medical person has discovered that woolen clothes cause indigestion. Probably food has something to do with it, too.
